Power struggles, angry outbursts, refusing to end excessive screen time – the list can go on. Parenting challenging behaviours can be frustrating and exhausting. This workshop introduced strategies for minimizing conflict and increasing positive interactions with children and youth. Often a few small changes in how we interact can have profound ripple effects. This workshop had emphasis toward individuals parenting children and youth with a trauma history that is resulting in challenging behaviours.

Ashleigh Martinflatt is a professor at Vancouver Island University, teaching in the Child and Youth Care and Social Work programs with a focus on children, youth, and families. Ashleigh is also a clinical counsellor at Island Clinical Counselling, who specializes in working with children/youth and caregivers.
